

More than one way to join

Ola likes rattling music; Moss likes a calmer viewing place. Neither preference needs fixing. Read at a comfortable volume and let a child change how, when, or whether they join a gathering. A quiet corner is an option, not a place someone is sent. Real outings need a trusted grown-up and a plan for breaks. These activities can stay entirely on the page. A grown-up can read aloud. Pointing, speaking and drawing are all welcome; writing is optional. Optional extensions invite comparison and revision. The separate flat-colour guide offers possibilities, not a correct-colour test.

Using these pages

Print this monochrome book at actual size on A4 paper. Keep the colour guide on screen or print only the pages you want. Try any colours; the guide is one possible interpretation.

The separate guide repeats the same figures with flat fills. It does not fill the open activity areas or set a correct answer.

Original AI-assisted story and artwork. The main illustrations are traced vector artwork. No learning outcome or curriculum approval is promised.

A rattly beginning

Ola shook a little rattle beside the parade table. Chika, chika, chick! Moss was painting a pennant, but the rattling made it hard to enjoy the swirls. “Could you stop for a moment?” Moss asked. Ola lowered the rattle. The table grew quiet again.

A flag from your imagination

Invent a flag for a pretend parade. It can have a big shape, a pattern or a picture of your choosing. Draw it in the open space; there is no correct design to copy.

A grown-up can read this aloud. Point, speak or draw; writing is optional.

Optional next step: Explain one choice, or change a detail to make a different flag.